About the University Center for Social and Urban Research (UCSUR)

UCSUR was established in 1972 to serve as a resource for researchers and educators interested in the basic and applied social and behavioral sciences. UCSUR promotes and coordinates interdisciplinary research focused on the social, economic, and health issues most relevant to our society. UCSUR carries out this mission by (1) providing research support infrastructure and training in the social and behavioral sciences to faculty throughout the University; (2) collecting and disseminating regional and national policy-relevant data to support faculty research and community development, and (3) conducting original research in a few focused areas, including urban impact analysis, survey methodology, and psychosocial aspects of aging. Additional information on the center is available online at: www.ucsur.pitt.edu

About the Program in Urban and Regional Analysis

UCSUR's Urban and Regional Analysis (URAP) Program analyzes major economic and demographic trends in the Pittsburgh region in national and international contexts. URA brings together faculty, research staff, and graduate students to examine important urban and regional issues, with the results disseminated widely to state and regional policymakers, local officials, and community and economic development organizations. URAP maintains the Pittsburgh REMI Model, a comprehensive econometric model of the southwestern Pennsylvania economy used for economic impact analysis and forecasting for an 11-county region. The program also fosters the development of new methods of data collection and analysis. URAP research is published in scholarly journals and technical reports and has been an important element of UCSUR's commitment to providing regional economic development analysis to both the academic community and the Pittsburgh region. Through URAP's work, UCSUR is a research affiliate of the Pennsylvania State Data Center, the official source of demographic and economic data for the state.

Foreword: Population Trends in the City of Pittsburgh

The City of Pittsburgh has experienced nearly continuous population decline through the latter half of the 20th century. The city's peak population is typically cited as the 676,806 residents enumerated in the 1950 decennial census, with ongoing decline recorded over each subsequent decade through 2010.¹

While the decennial census in 2020 showed the population of the City of Pittsburgh declined by 2,733 over the previous decade, almost all of that net decline can be attributed to the contraction of the population in correctional facilities located within the city, which declined by 2,574 over the decade.² The noninstitutionalized population residing within the city showed a slight net increase between 2010 and 2020 for the first decade since the 1940s.

Figure 1 shows both Census Bureau annual population estimates, and decennial census counts for the residential population of the City of Pittsburgh since 1990. While the city's overall population level can be characterized as stable for more than a decade, this apparent stability masks ongoing and significant changes in the characteristics of the city's resident population, and disparate patterns of change across city neighborhoods. The profiles compiled here summarize the major socioeconomic trends currently impacting the Pittsburgh region, the City of Pittsburgh, and ongoing changes across individual city neighborhoods.

² The decline in the population in correctional facilities includes the closure in 2017 of the former Western Penitentiary (or SCI-Pittsburgh), a state prison that was located in the Brighton Heights neighborhood of the city of Pittsburgh.

Data and Methodology

This report compiles data from multiple years of the U.S. Census Bureau's American Community Survey (ACS) summarizing recent economic and demographic trends impacting southwestern Pennsylvania and neighborhoods of the City of Pittsburgh. Previous and related reports are available on the web page for the University Center for Social and Urban Research (UCSUR) at the University of Pittsburgh: www.ucsur.pitt.edu.

The ACS conducts surveys of residents across the nation throughout the year and produces annual updates on population characteristics across a broad range of socioeconomic topics for geographic areas with populations greater than 65,000. For small geographic areas, including census tracts and block groups, the ACS produces estimates generated from data aggregated over five years of survey responses. The data profiles compiled in this report compare ACS estimates for two five-year time periods: 2008-2012 and 2018-2022.

The American Community Survey is just one data source on population change within the City of Pittsburgh. The Census Bureau is also the source for the decennial census, which is a complete enumeration of nation's population. Between decennial years, the Census Bureau produces annual population estimates based on administrative and other data sources. Whereas the decennial census is a more definitive reference of population counts, it produces only a specific set of demographic data limited mostly to population counts by age, race and gender for a given area. The ACS provides data across a much wider range of economic and demographic topics. Estimates produced by the American Community Survey are subject to sampling and non-sampling errors. The Decennial Census is the best reference for population counts for a specific geography in the United States. The Census Bureau advises that the ACS should principally be used to obtain population characteristics (percents, means, medians, and rates) rather than estimates of population counts.

City of Pittsburgh neighborhoods are typically made up of a partial census tract, a single census tract, or multiple census tracts, making the five-year estimates the only ACS data available for neighborhood-level analysis. While the ACS also reports some data at the smaller block group level, many ACS tables are only available at the census tract level. The specific census tracts that make up each city of Pittsburgh neighborhood or neighborhood group presented in this report are itemized in appendix 2.

The tables presented here cover the age, race, household types, school enrollment, recent geographic mobility, housing tenure (home ownership vs. rental occupancy), labor force status, educational attainment, commuting mode (journey to work), and poverty status for the residential population of each area. The specific ACS tables that were used to construct these profiles are itemized in appendix 1 of this report.

While the ACS data for the 2018-2022 period is the most recent five-year data available as of June 2024 when this report was produced, it nonetheless represents historical data collected between two and six years prior. Any trends identified by comparing the two periods can be interpreted as change over a ten-year period. Not all trends that can be identified in these profiles have necessarily continued, and some trends may have accelerated. These profiles are intended to be one data source to be used in conjunction with other data for those studying change within the City of Pittsburgh and individual neighborhoods.

Additional technical documentation on the American Community Survey is available on the Census Bureau web site at: <https://www.census.gov/programs-surveys/acs/technical-documentation/code-lists.html>. Data used to produce these profiles will be made available via the Western Pennsylvania Regional Data Center (WPRDC): <https://ucsur.pitt.edu/wprdc.php>. This report was prepared by Christopher Briem (cbriem@pitt.edu) of the Urban and Regional Analysis Program at the University of Pittsburgh's University Center for Social and Urban Research (UCSUR).

Regional Profiles

Included here are data profiles for 1) the United States, and six subareas of southwestern Pennsylvania including 2) the Pittsburgh Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA); 3) Allegheny County; 4) the seven counties of the Pittsburgh MSA that are outside of Allegheny County; 5) the City of Pittsburgh, and 6) the areas within Allegheny County outside of the city of Pittsburgh.

Note the Pittsburgh Metropolitan Areas (MSA) is currently defined as eight counties: Allegheny, Armstrong, Beaver, Butler, Fayette, Lawrence, Washington, and Westmoreland counties in southwestern Pennsylvania. The Pittsburgh MSA was recently redefined in 2023 to include Lawrence County. Previously the Pittsburgh MSA was defined as seven counties. The Pittsburgh MSA profile here reflects the current eight-county definition of the MSA in both time periods. Figure 2 shows the current definition of the Pittsburgh MSA.
